THE EVENING STAR.

When Senator John J. Ingalis groped in one of the dark corners of literature and brought to light a beautiful and eloquently expressed sentiment from Massillon a great many people closed their ears to the charge of play which was made and agreed with Mr. Ingalls that he was entitled to gratitude for having discovered and publicly displayed such a gem. even although proper credit had not been given the author. There were, indeed, numerous individuals who held that the accusation of cribbing had not been sustained and who insisted that by some mysterious mental process two minds-widely separated by timehad produced offspring that looked very much alike. The Massillon incident is now almost forgotten, but another and more marked exhibition of the occult process referred to will recall the earlier exhibition and reopen a much vexed question. A day or two since there appeared, in several newspapers, an extraordinary production of some length and signed by the eminent Kansan. The article in question was on an interesting topic-"The Cabinet of the United States"and had the agriculturist from Atchison been more intent on literature and less anxious as to his potato crop and the political possibilities to be found in constant association with a hoe he must have detected a striking resemblance between his remarks on the cabinet and an array of facts on the same subject which have for years been printed in the Congressional Directory. That he did not do so was his misfortune, for there are slanderers who will once more cry "plagiarism" and accuse the distinguished author of that which is in literature "the unpardonable sin." After a brief intro- Extra-heavy Saxony Wool Underwear... ductory disquisition on the manner in which foreign ministries are born and disposed of the ex-Senator proceeds to give a consensus of the duties which by law and custom are attached to those officers who comprise the President's official family; and this piece of descriptive work is a replica of the more important por tions of the chapter on "Department Duties," which commences on page 199 of the latest Congressional Directory. Occasionally a redundant word is omitted and once in a while there is something which would indicate that the thinkers of the two authors had temporarily separated; but, taken as a whole, the two publications are twins. That the ex-Senator should have stolen his material can hardly be deemed possible. Had Mr. Ingalls drawn his information from the directory fount he would never have attached his signature to the borrowed statement of facts; and if the composition was not original with him why did ho have it copyrighted? It is an extraordinary coincidence, worthy the attention of editors and psychological students.

The October term of the Supreme Court of the United States which opens next Monday is one of the most important ever held in all the history of that great tribunal. In the first place the number of cases, 395, is the largest on docket at the beginning of a term. There has been a steady increase in the number of cases during many years. The organization of an intermediate court of appeals has not yet affected the volume of business before the Supreme Court, it having been too recent to have had such effect as will almost certainly follow. The Bering sea Seyward case, the lottery cases, the grain elevator case from New York, and the three cases involving the constitutionality of the tariff act are set for the 18th and 19th instants. In the interesting legal contention over the last mentioned issue the Mc-Kinley act is assailed on the ground that the bill never passed the House and Senate as it le President. It is contanded that the bill which did pass both houses of Congress, and which included the tobacco rebate, was never presented to the President, as required by the Constitution. The point involved is whether the omission of an item from a bill which had passed Congress vitiates the legislation, the executive having approved the

The sudden death of Charles Stewart Parnell following so fast upon his loss of supreme leadership in the Irish party, is a conspicuously less notable event than it would have been few months before. But it is an event that will probably have far-reaching consequences. The opportunity is now presented of a cordial reunion of the home rule party, and unless the friends of the late leader are bent on mischief the public may expect a speedy healing of the breach between the factions. The Parnellites are in a very small mi nority and have no mo tive now to persevere in their course. Of the parliamentary talerate of the late Irish leader there can be no question. He was the ablest of Irish politicians since Daniel O'Connell, and if his moral had been equal to his intellectual qualities he would figure in history as one of the greatest men of the times.

The Was nington newspaper reader escapes the constantly reiterated advice to "register" that is fi'lling the journals of other cities. At the same time he cannot look with indifference on the agitation, as the character of much of the city's future population depends upon the votes to which this registering is preliminary.

Now that the government leader in the British house of commons is dead it is not respect-ful to allude to him as Sir Joseph Porter, K. C. B, since his name out of Gilbert & Sullivan's opera was William Henry Smith. This parliamentary Smith was a ten-millionaire and the greatest news-stand man in the world.

The weather did not dampen the enthusiasm or mar the success of German day. Our German fellow citizens did themselves high credit in every feature of the celebration. In the number and appointments of the floats, in the turnout of citizens and in the speaking and other exercises at Schuetzen Park the occasion was everything that it should be.

The "personal finance" issue that the republicans have introduced in the Ohio campaign should be handled with care lest it prove ething of a boomerang.

This might be a good time for some of the professional fasters to go over to Europe and > Tomorrow, October 8, will be the last day of our annual "Opening" for the display of our newest and latest styles in Cloads, Suits and Furnishings, and while the building is in its "Dress of Green" we invite every one in Washington and vicinity to drop in and see us, not the you are not always welcome, but we want you to see the sice while it is no tastefully decorated. While the elegant display of autumnal styles and fabrics in assign or accuminal styles and labrics is at its best. The whole effect has been patriotically heightened by saily colored flars and buntines and a profuse collec-tion of choice plants, palms, &c. You know us as the leading Cloak and

Suit House of the District, and you will and nouse of the Pristrict, and you will find, upon examination of our stock, that this opinion will be strengthened. We have the latest fall and winter "Novelties" in Fashionable Costs, Capes, Cloaks and Suits, and you will find here the season's most stylish and elegant productions. The styles are American modifications of extreme European ideas, approved by the "fashion leaders" of the country. Most of these styles are confined strictly to us in this vicinity.

We want particularly to call attention to our new "Bernhardt" Long Capes and Fur-trimmed Coats. The former have received the most hearty indorsemave received the most hearty indorse-ment of fashion's devotees, as they are de-cidedly stylish, comfortable and warnith-giving. We can conscientiously say that there is not a handsomer and better wearing line of Ladies' Fur-trimmed Coats in Washington that these which we are now offering at remarkably rea-conable prices. Souable prices.

Remember, the store has been entirely remodeled and an elegant Whittier electric elevator added.

this week-TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY AND THURS IF YOU'RE LOOKING FOR BARGAINS

In Fine Goods it is best to look where the best qualities are to be found at the lowest figures. I noted in Saturday's Star an assortment of Lace Curtains unequaled in variety, design or price. No one need go out of washington to secure the happient conceits in this line; they are right here in town and it would be a pleasure to any one to see what I have. The qualities, proportionately, far exceed prices.

I have just opened a full line of samples in Drapery, quite a departure, embracing the finest textures. I will not keep a full stock on hand to get shop worn, but sell by samples only and deliver goods, gustanteed, the following day fresh from the manufacturer or importer. Call at once; you will see something unusually handsome. The prices will suit you, I am sure. I have Table Lineas, Tray Gloths, Bed Sets, Tidies, Squares, &c., among them.
